Judging Criteria

Sight-reading will be judged on the preparation period, accuracy of reading, adherence to style, interpretation and musicianship.

Instruction Period

The director of a participating organization will be allowed the following time limits to study the score and instruct the organization:

5A, 6A, 7A - 10 Minutes

4A - 9 Minutes

All others - 8 Minutes

Director Limitations

Only one director may instruct and direct an organization in sight-reading. The director in charge of the group, adjudicator, students, additional directors from that school, and the parents of students in the organization (ABA 2015) will be allowed in the sight-reading room during the instruction and performance. The other directors and monitors may assist with logistics, but the monitors must leave the room when the instruction time begins. No other audience is allowed.

Be certain that each step is completed before moving to the next portion of the procedure.

When the Conductor Enters the Room:

- The adjudicator should approach the conductor with a professional greeting.
- Confirm that the conductor received the instrumentation information which should have included the instrumentation for the sight-reading selection to be performed. If not, provide him/her with a copy of the email or mailing that was sent to all participants.
- Remind the conductor of the percussion requirements of the selection to be performed. Also, the part distribution for 1st/2nd parts for instruments.
- Remind the conductor of the timpani pitches (have them on the board if possible). Also, remind the conductor that the timpani needs to be tuned prior to the beginning of the general explanation period.

An assistant conductor may assist with timpani tuning, if necessary. Once the explanation begins no one other than the primary conductor explaining the selection will be allowed to assist the timpanist with tuning or any other form of instruction.

- Remind the conductor the time allowed for their classification (10/9/8 minutes) and ask the conductor if they would like a warning before the time expires (ex. One minute then 30 seconds, etc.). They may choose any time they like for the warning.

Student instructions:

- After a brief professional greeting to the ensemble, introduce yourself to the students and say the following:

“Today, I will be adjudicating the sight-reading portion of your assessment. At this time, please place your folders and other belongings under your chair and we will begin passing out your music. Please place your part face down on your stand as you receive it.”

- Show the conductor the cover of the score for the piece to be performed and ask the following question verbatim:

“This organization will be reading (title of selection) which has been chosen for classification_____. Is this the correct classification for your organization?”

- Have the students open their folder and remove the parts for the correct selection they are to read for the group’s classification. Then ask the following:

“Does everyone have the correct part, including part assignment, correct key, and correct clef for your instrument? Then turn it face down on your stand again.”

The judge should then solve any problems that might exist. Be sure to double check that each student has the music for the correct selection. After any problems are resolved and all is confirmed, proceed to the next step.

- Ask the conductor the following question verbatim:

“Has this organization or any of its student members heard, read, or performed this selection (indicating the music) at any time prior to this evaluation?”

If the answer is yes, put the parts away and move to the next level piece higher and repeat the above procedures for music distribution.

- Read the following information to the students and conductor:

“During the instruction period (10/9/8 minutes) your conductor may use the time as they wish by incorporating any combination of silent study and/or conductor explanation. During this time period your conductor may point out specific performance problems, demonstrate how ritards, fermatas, etc. will be conducted, call attention to accidentals, identify unique characteristics of the music (i.e., who has the melody, important passages for certain sections, the presence of repeats, etc.) and answer your questions. At the conductor’s discretion, you may finger passages at any time during the general explanation period. The conductor and students may count, sing or audibly reproduce the music in any fashion except playing their instrument (including mouthpieces). The director may not play music on any instrument or play a recording of the music. No one is to make any markings on the music. Immediately following the instruction period and prior to the sight-reading performance, the group may play a warm-up tone. Once the performance has begun, the director will not be allowed to give further vocal instruction other than rehearsal letters or numbers.

Are there any questions regarding the procedure?”

At the Conclusion of the Performance:

- Thank the students and ask that they pass their music to their first chair to return them to the folders. Once all the music is collected, remind the students to be sure to take all their personal items with them as they leave the room.
